Gondolas are cheap; twenty cents an hour or $r.2o per day of ten hours for two people and twenty-six cents an hour after dark, is the tariff, to which must be added the universal pourboire of a few cents. This gratuity is never scowled at, as in southern Italy, but is always graciously received with a musical grazie and a smile that is very winning We just snapped Desdemona s House. That reminds me that if the pillows of ancient Venice had been as hard as are their descendants, Othello might have dpne quicker execution by hitting her over the head. We landed at the Academy of Fine Arts where there is a magnificent collection of paintings, principally by Venetian masters. There is an elaborate catalogue, apparently made by shaking the numbers in a hat and then printing them in...
