Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Decrees of God: A Discourse Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear. - [1 Peter, ch. iii, v.xv. This passage of scripture has not been selected so much for the purpose of confining my remarks to the exact spirit of the passage, as for another purpose. Contrary to my custom, it will be used as a motto in discussing an important and greatly controverted subject, viz: The Decrees of God. This doctrine, as held by Presbyterians, has had, and still has, many bitter opponents, who, in the heat of debate, have accused us of heresy, and of teaching the doctrines of devils. In opposition, however, to all railing and calumny, true Presbyterians are firm believers in the doctrine of divine decrees, and it is hoped that they will remain steadfast in the faith of their fathers, until the Lord changes the Bible. In giving reasons for our faith, instead of giving railing for railing -...
