Excerpt: .publicly expressed, is, that his was a very tender nature, the soft spots being both on his head and heart! When the firing ceased, Gen. White surrendered the place to Gen. A. P. Hill, acting under Gen. Jackson. Nine thousand of our troops piled their arms and turned over their cannon to the rebel authorities. Rigby s Battery consisted of eight splendid pieces, and the finest horses, according to rebel testimony, that had fallen into the hands of Confederates on any field. Between five and six hundred contrabands who, under Capt. Powell, had been working on our fortifications until run away by shot and shell, were taken wherever they could be found; and it was the boast of a rebel officer, that they had captured half a million dollars worth of niggers. Private property was respected, and we were treated respectfully as brothers. The...
